Memo From The Board

Our land owner's dispute with the county over the use of the land known as "Lake Edun" has gone on now for many years. The number of court appearances grows with each passing year and at times seems to have no sunset in sight. Claims and counter-claims are made by both sides the whole of which points out the ever burgeoning question of civil versus personal use of land. These are important considerations to be sure.

What is becoming evident in this dispute is the willingness of authorities to use any means to obtain the end they want. When no law could be found that prevented our favorite form of dress on private property they turned to other issues to achieve the effect they desired.

Recently an olive branch was offered after a faux-pas on the part of the county. It was hoped that this offer would lead to reconciliation. We, as the board of the Lake Edun Foundation were willing to meet with the landowner and a representative from the county in what was hoped would be a resolution of the tension we have existed under for the last several years. Unfortunately the county official did not honor his word and became a no show at the meeting. We are disappointed to say the least.

Many on the board have had the opportunity to travel to other naturist resorts and venues. Universally they speak of the civility they enjoyed during their visits. Naturists tend to be very friendly and supportive of one another and seek the best for the communities in which they live. All such naturist groups go to great lengths to insure they do not offend neighbors in their area. The Lake Edun Foundation has endeavored to do the same around our special place. We understand many do not appreciate or understand why we do what we do. Nor do they actually know what principles our community promotes and lives by. All we have ever asked is for the opportunity to exist at our special place unhindered. We have made no attempt to mandate to others how they live or how they should use their property.

Recently we invited all of the neighbors around the lake to come for an evening and visit the lake. The response was less than we had hoped for, yet we were not picketed. We received no threatening comments. No letters were sent that protested our existence. Several of the closer neighbors have been visited by members of the board. None has spoken against us or our members.

This leads us to believe that a reasonable conditional use permit could be granted to our landowner that would establish the guidelines for all parties involved in the land use issue. Our neighbors would be assured of our current and future intentions. We would find the same information useful to our foundation. The dialog between all of us would be refreshing!

Work Day Scheduled: October 13

It takes a lot of effort and many people to keep our special place so special. One of the annual tasks we face is securing everything for the Winter.

We have scheduled a work day to pick up the lounge chairs, boats, docks and complete a significant number of the other pretty minor tasks required at the end of our season. If the effort is shared by a number of Eduners, it is very manageable; if left to a few, it is burdensome.

We hope you will join us from noon until 4 pm on October 13 to help out. It will be followed by one of our fabulous Pot Luck dinners, and a sauna.

In the event of inclement weather, all activities scheduled for October 13 will be postponed one week until the 20th.

Naked Plays Postponed ... Again

Unfortunately, our director has been unable to attract a sufficient number of actors to stage this year's production of the Naked Plays.

"We are disappointed," said Jon Lothenore, founding director of the plays, "that we could not interest more actors and naturists to participate in the plays." The first staging of the original one-act plays was extremely successful and very well received.

The Board of Directors will be discussing various options for producing the plays and will make an announcement when more information is known.

Thank You David & Lonnie

We truly appreciate the long and continued support of David S. Recently, we received another money order to support our legal defense fund. Although he has not been able to visit this year, his continued support is much appreciated.

We also wish to recognize the generous donation Lonnie L. made over the Labor Day weekend. We appreciate both your help and gift.

Random Thoughts And Reflections

Some Eduners have placed locks on the lockers along the south side of the barn. As we enter the winter, it is important that we know whose locks these are so we can move the lockers if it becomes necessary. If you have a lock at our special place, insure we know about it or it is removed prior the October 13 otherwise we will cut your lock off.

Many Eduners are interested in additional sand on our beaches. At its most recent meeting, the Board decided to schedule delivery of sand in the Winter when both the ground and the lake are frozen. This will permit us to easily spread the sand on the ice where it will fall through more evenly. If you are interested in contributing to the sand fund, you have a couple of extra months. However, we MUST have your contribution in hand before we order the sand. More $ = more sand.

Sauna Season is once again upon us. Check the schedule each month to see when the saunas are scheduled. If you have a particular date or time you would like to see saunas scheduled, contact us.

Time has come to change the lock at the road. Members will find the new combination enclosed with this issue of Bare Facts. Remember! If you are the last to leave, be sure to lock the chain.

From The Mail Bag

Dear Lake Edun,

We received your letter wondering if we were still alive. Yes we are, and thank you for checking so you could stop mailing if we were no longer interested. However, we do enjoy your letters and news and topics.

We have never been to your place though, sorry. In Sept 2006, we had our first boy. Since then, as you can guess, life changes and we are more busy than ever. We hope to come one day.

We are bringing the boy up right though. Last week we were in Estes Park Colo and prior to that Creede Colo. We are teaching the 11 month old guy to skinny dip in rivers and lakes ie: Mills lake in Estes. If there were not so many people around, I would have gone also!

Anyhow, I do understand if you stop your letters, but we did and do enjoy them and either way hope to visit one day.

– Rheuben and Annie

Dear Lake Edun,

I enjoyed my visit even if I was the only one there and had a rain shower that afternoon. I enjoyed walking in the warm rain which we do not have in Colorado. I will definitely be back later his summer for another visit and maybe camp out.

– Thanks, Mark C.

On The Web – The Swimming Hole

I had to look twice, well, three times actually, before I could believe my eyes. Asheville, North Carolina's official internet tourism website has three short videos to attract visitors. The first two are your usual tourist attractions. However, it is the third that drew my attention. You aren't going to believe this. It is of an adult couple, in the woods, by a river, skinny dipping. You read right – skinny dipping! Unfortunately, they also fussed out the "naughty" parts, but there is no doubt that they are nude and having a blast at, "The Swimming Hole." See for yourself. Go to <http://www.exploreasheville.com/press-room/view-the-campaign/index.aspx> My question is, why can't every community take a light hearted approach to skinny dipping as being wholesome and as American as apple pie?

New York City Pays $29,000

Who knew it was legal for a woman to walk around with her breasts exposed in New York?

Well, one woman did - and a cop didn't - and now she has forced the city to fork over a $29,000 legal settlement for illegally busting her when she lawfully bared her bosom and went for a stroll two years ago.

Jill Coccaro, a 27-year-old East Village artist who now goes by the name Phoenix Feeley, went au naturel on Aug. 4, 2005, when she pulled down the front of her painter's jumpsuit during an art-show promotion to cool off.

In 1992 a state appeals court ruled that if men could expose their chests in public, women could not be punished for doing the same.

In 2003, a $10,000 settlement from the city was won for a model who had been busted wearing a thong and body paint to the Coney Island Mermaid Parade.

But that didn't stop a cop, who spotted Feeley at about 1:30 a.m. strolling topless on Delancey Street, telling her to cover up. She refused, informing the officer she had a legal right to be naked to the waist, just like a man. The officer then took her into custody for indecent exposure.

Feeley spent 12 hours in custody before the officer told her the District Attorney's Office had declined to press charges.

While she was detained, Feeley claims, an officer yanked her from a patrol car by her hair, and was taken to Bellevue Hospital for a psychiatric evaluation. She reports that the police refused to help her repair her by-then badly ripped jumpsuit and when released, she walked out with her shirt off and her pants on.

Feeley said she's gone bare-breasted before ? after running the 2004 New York City marathon - without cops bothering her.

"I've always just felt that was something natural," Feeley said of baring her breasts. "I've kind of always done it out of practicality."

She sued the city and the arresting officers last October. The city agreed to settle, without admitting any fault, on June 4.

"I felt like I deserved it," Feeley said.

Welcome To Pittsburgh

Have you ever been to Pittsburgh? I have, but entirely missed the downtown area. However, I did visit the cultural center of Pittsburgh – Three Rivers Stadium. Go Steelers! Anyway, a story about Pittsburgh's, "Downtown Corridor of Shame," caught my eye.

A reporter noticed some of the architectural features of downtown buildings that feature, Gasp! Dozens of nude and might-as-well-be-nude representations integral to some of the city's most respected buildings. All right there, just above our heads, not to mention those of children!

The story goes on to say that even more shocking, these disturbing images are clustered along Downtown's financial and civic power streets – a section of the Golden Triangle that should be called what it is: "Pittsburgh's Corridor of Shame."

Enumerated are a number of statues and bas reliefs depicting nude or nearly nude men, women, and children on buildings. For example, a statue at First Lutheran Church titled Resurrection depicts a boy wearing a loin cloth. The author comments, "We hope that when we meet the Heavenly Father, we'll be wearing more than an unpinned diaper, as depicted in this statue...."

Again at the County Office Building where there are several nude depictions the writer says, "this building is the disgrace of our city, a virtual cornucopia of perversion." "A circular inset depicts a nude little girl... On another corner a shirtless man hold the sacred Ten Commandments, while at the other corner, a topless woman with disturbingly erect nipples pats the head of a naked little boy."

This but samples the extent of civic nakedness in Pittsburgh – at least in art on buildings. Ok – so this is satire, but it does raise some interesting questions.

While on a recent trip to Washington D.C. – our nation's capitol – your ever enquiring editor walked the length of the mall in sweltering heat and humidity, (fully clothed, I might add) to view the national monuments. On one end is the Lincoln Memorial. When finished contemplating the immense image of Mr. Lincoln, I looked up at the murals painted on either side of the building, high near the ceiling. Imagine my wonder to notice that many of the figures were either nude or only partially dressed – both male and female. I had never seen that before!

The memorial built between 1914 and 1922 – the real good old days of real family values, incorporates all this nudity to represent the principles of freedom, justice, unity, brotherhood, and charity. How can this be? (See for yourself at <http://www.nps.gov.linc>).

I'm sure if we looked at just about any American city of any size closely, we would find an abundance of examples of nude figures. Even Topeka is likely not exempt from nude depictions of humans in or on buildings. The nude figure has been used since classic times to portray the noblest of human desires, aspirations, and achievements. Somehow, most people, including civic and government officials recognize the legitimacy of this use of the naked body.

Why then in the real world of today is the actual nude human body viewed with suspicion, horror, disgust, shame, fear, outrage? Just how far this revulsion at the nude human body goes is documented by Mark Storey in the pages of N, issue 20.1, Fall/Winter 2000.

The cover shows a group of people attempting to put clothes on a statue of Poseidon on display in front of the Sacramento Convention Center. Such moral outrage over nudity isn't new. One of the popes ordered "clothing" for a number of the images on the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel. Fortunately, with the restoration of the magnificent art of Michelangelo, these additions were rightly removed.

Storey rightly points out that in the classical period, the Greeks thought of humans as being able to control their bodies. They envisioned this self control as dictated by the ideal of Beauty, shaping each person in the physical, moral/intellectual, and civic realm.

However, with the acceptance of the theological teachings of Saint Augustine by the Western church, a different view of man emerged. Augustine taught that there is a universal sense of shame at nakedness. Due to the effects of the Fall, man is no longer able to control himself. Over the last 1600 years since Augustine, anxiety about the body, especially its sexual capacity, has vexed Western society.

This perceived tension between the body as good and the body as dangerous still plagues us today. As a people, we seem to live at the extremes. Either there is excess as in Girls Gone Wild!, or there is repression. What is needed is a balanced view of our capacity to make choices in keeping with established standards of conduct. It is true that everyone will not abide by established standards. However, this is no argument to then ensure that no one has the opportunity to demonstrate they can exercise self control. We must not allow the perfect to be the enemy of the good.

Nudists/naturists over more than 100 years have demonstrated that indeed, people can and do control their sexual nature and respect the person of others. They do distinguish between nudity and sexual behavior. The real shame of our culture is the rampant sexualization of women for commercial purposes.

I think the author of the article about Pittsburgh was poking fun at our warped sensibilities about the human body. That is, the strain of American culture that now expresses horror at any nudity in total disregard for the historic depiction of the nude body symbolizing the very values generations past viewed as expressing our highest ideals.

One is led to wonder, would it hurt us to grow up as a culture, recognizing that while there are extremes, most of us can comfortably live in the middle? Isn't it possible to simply see the body as a gift to value and cherish both clothed and naked?

Nude Recreation is booming as more people try it for the first time. USAnudist.com is a newly opened website filling their information needs via the Internet.

Not Just Naked ... Adventurous!

The following is an editorial by Tom Pine from his monthly newsletter, The Naked Truth Naturist.

How do you view getting naked? No, I'm not talking about nude = sex, I'm referring to how you think of your time spent outside of clothes. Is it something you really look forward to, or is it one of those take-it-or-leave-it things? Do you think of your time naked as the highlight of your day, or just a ho-hum experience? Do you cherish those times you can be bare, or do you not care if you must wear clothes? How about when you swim? Do you find having to wear a swimsuit a chore, a silly inconvenience, or doesn't it matter? When you go outside on a really hot day, do you find those clothes sticking to your body a nuisance?

Now that Marilyn and I have been living full-time in our RV, if we are going to stay anywhere for any length of time, we always opt for a nudist park, someplace where we can be as nude as we want. When we return from shopping, or other excursion requiring clothes, getting home and getting naked are almost synonymous. In fact, there are times, when I find myself in a non-naturist home, I have to remind myself not to strip off when I enter the door, usually about the time my belt is undone. You see, living bare is the norm at our home – RV, or otherwise. In short, we've been living naked a lot.

Yet, I've encountered another attitude as well. We've been at some nudist parks where the majority of the folks we see are wearing clothing. While that may seem to be no big deal to some, the question that always comes to my mind is, Why live in a nudist park and NOT be naked? There you are ... living in a community where you can literally climb out of bed, take a shower, towel dry (or even stay wet and air dry), and leave your dwelling without once thinking of having to dress? You can swim, take a walk, participate in sports, do home repairs, or just sit in a lounge, with other people present or not, and read a magazine, or book. No one will stop to give you a fine (or even a lecture), or cart you off to jail. No one will point the finger of shame at you, or take you in for psychological counseling. You can start and end your day without ever having to put on anything more than a pair of sandals or a hat. Who would even want anything less – especially within the borders of a nudist park?

Evidently, some people don't consider this the blessing that it is. I've heard arguments from: "It's too cold," to, "When you can be nude all the time, sometimes you just want to be dressed – it's no big deal being nude." Think about those statements for a minute. If most of the human race lives clothed – because that's the way they were brought up – why couldn't it be the other way around? Why couldn't living naked become the norm? Yes, you would wear what's necessary when the temp's too chilly, but to be anything short of completely naked when the weather's ideal should be normal if one is conditioned to live that way. And covering up for comfort could consist of wearing a serape-like garment, or a cloak to keep warm – shucking it to go nude when indoors, or when it's comfortably warm outside again.

I'd like to posit a theory of mine at this point. Perhaps one of the reasons folks – and I'm talking nudists/naturists here – don't go nude when they can, is a lack of excitement about the nudity in their lives – getting naked has become blasé and routine to them. But, because, and especially for that reason, the majority of society expects us to be clothed, I get a thrill every time I can live naked. I'm always pushing the envelope – getting bare in all circumstances and situations. If I go to a friend's or relative's house with a pool, or hot tub, my first question is, "Do you allow skinny-dipping," or "Do you use your hot tub European-style?" If I'm out in a remote location hiking, I will strip off at the first possible opportunity. When I drive, especially on a long trip, I'm often nude, or at least bottom-free. Being able to enjoy parties, and holidays, and other social functions naked with others is heaven for me. And, every so often, I pause and receive another thrill when I consider the fact I'm able to do it all in the nude. One of the great joys of my life is to step out the door of our RV, into the Great Outdoors, without a concern for the fact I haven't a stitch of clothing on. Yeehaw!

Let's face it: we were designed by our Creator to live naked. In a world where we're expected to wear something, shouldn't we get excited when we can live without those expected threads? Could it be possible that those people who push the envelope regarding nudity do it – not only to raise social awareness – but because they get a thrill out of it? Perhaps what some would call exhibitionism is just the joy of doing something prohibited and – not to be underestimated – fun? We're not talking sexual, or some other illicit activity – we're talking simple nudity.

Perhaps those teenagers in Brattleboro, Vermont are onto something – a way to rebel that, not only gets attention, but is just plain, harmless fun. Heck, we should encourage it. Parents worry about their kids doing drugs and having premarital sex – why not just let them congregate nude in a park somewhere on a hot summer's day? Then again, maybe we shouldn't encourage it – just look the other way – for, the minute they think it's okay with Mom and Dad, they'll stop doing it and look elsewhere for less harmless kicks.

So, if you find that your time being naked has become routine, perhaps you need to inject some adventure into the experience. I'm not saying you should go out and get arrested, but try to be more open about your nudity with your friends and relatives. Look for opportunities to vacation at nude locales. Participate naked in activities that you've never tried before, even if it's just to hike in the woods nude. Host nude barbecues in your backyard. Join in protests that use nudity as a consciousness-raising tool. In other words – have some fun – be adventurous!

New Ideas

Things are always changing. We have enjoyed the largess of several in the Topeka area for years. Whether it be the hot tub at Dave's or the grounds at Truck Henge. The board is always talking about other activities we could do; other venues we could visit. The '07 season is coming to a close and we are looking forward to '08. We are also looking for new ideas and places we could use. If you have suggestions please drop a line to Maxine. Maxine will forward the note on to the board.

Annual Meeting And Board of Directors Responsibilities

Our Annual Meeting, as required by our By-Laws is scheduled for October 27. This is an opportunity for our Board of Directors to report on progress and plans to the membership; it is also an opportunity for members to bring suggestions and concerns to the Board. We hope all Eduners will plan to attend this important meeting.

We also hope some members will consider running for a position on the Board. It is the Board that makes everything happen for the foundation. They make the plans and allocate our budget. Please don't wait to be asked. If you have an interest, review the responsibilities and take some time to give back to an organization that given so much to all of us.

The Board of Directors sets policy and implements the program for the Lake Edun Foundation. Board members meet monthly as a group and as needed with their committee. Each member of the Board chairs a committee with specific responsibilities and makes periodic contributions to Bare Facts.

President:

Preside at all meetings of the Board of Directors. Sit as an ex officio member of all committees.

Secretary:

Keep minutes of meetings of both the Board of Directors and members. Maintain membership records. Carry on correspondence with members and with others for the Foundation.

Maintain contact with all appropriate national organizations including TNS, NEC and NAC. Educate our membership on the function and importance of these organizations. Encourage support among our members for these groups.

Treasurer:

Account for all money and property owned by the Foundation. Pay all legitimate invoices in a timely manner as directed by the Board. Make regular financial reports to the Board.

Facilities and Conservation:

Insure we meet our obligations for conservation, maintenance and improvement as required by the terms of our lease. Organize our resources, including work days, toward achievement of these obligations. Coordinate with other committees to insure their requirements are met. Provide advice for members on their agricultural activities and garden plots

Our lease requires we maintain a rustic, natural setting. This committee must plan ways that will tend to encourage suitable plant and wildlife growth. This includes planting trees and shrubs and attracting compatible wildlife. This does not mean all plants and wildlife are desirable. Poison ivy and other noxious and annoying plants must be discouraged. Likewise, beaver that kill trees or muskrat that damage the dam are not desirable. Our objective is to balance the needs of desirable plants and wildlife against our lease requirements.

Promotion/Publicity

The promotion and publicity committee should work in concert with the Education Committee to arrange for appropriate publicity of our foundation with the objective of improving the public perception of nude recreation in general and increasing membership in the Foundation. We want to present nude recreation as a healthy alternative to other forms of family entertainment. We should strive to be featured positively in news stories twice during the year.

Member Relations:

The overall purpose of this committee is to improve membership retention. Screen new applicants. Make a recommendation to the Board concerning their suitability for membership. Maintain contact with members; determine problems or conflicts that may develop with their membership. Work with the Social Committee to develop meaningful activities for all members. Remind members we have not seen about upcoming activities. Keep all members active and interested in the Foundation.

Education/Outreach:

Implement the educational mission of the Foundation to the public through seminars, press releases, articles, presentations, meetings, interviews, etc.

Education & Outreach committee is responsible for spreading the word on the beneficial impact naturism can have on the individual, the family, and our community.

Bare Facts Editor serves on this committee. Edit, write articles for, produce, print and mail our monthly newsletter.

The Web Master also serves on this committee. Maintain and enhance our presence on the Internet.

Social:

We realize not everyone will be comfortable with the Naturist lifestyle at first. The Social Committee must plan and coordinate special activities throughout the year that implement our educational objectives with our membership and permit members and guests to learn firsthand about the benefits of naturism. It should plan indoor events during winter months when use of our leased facility is not practical. It should make a special effort to conduct events that will attract women and families to the Foundation. Major summer activities should be limited to not more than one per month.

Return to Edun is a sub-committee. It plans the annual Return to Edun celebration including entertainment, security, and all aspects required for the safe execution of this event. Our objective for Return to Edun is to host an event to provide an enjoyable introduction to nude recreation for those who may not have tried it in the past. This committee should plan an event that is safe, enjoyable, and attracts new people to try the clothing-free lifestyle and then join the Lake Edun Foundation.

The End of Another Summer

By: Michael

The close of another summer season at Lake Edun is drawing near. With all the rain this year, the lake stayed close to full all summer. Trees and undergrowth flourished also. I've never seen the lake look more beautiful. Unfortunately, I wasn't able to visit the lake very often this year. This means that I didn't get to renew friendships with a number of people I have come to enjoy so much over the last few years.

The good news is I did get to spend time with a number of friends and meet some new members and several first time visitors. This was a real treat. This is very exciting. The continuing influx of new members and first time visitors is very encouraging for our future.

The numbers and mix of singles and couples exploring Lake Edun for the first time on just this one weekend was truly remarkable. Everyone I talked with commented on how beautiful Lake Edun is. The other asset is our members who are friendly and welcoming to all that visit.

Just how important Lake Edun is as a place where everyone is welcome and can feel accepted was forcefully brought to my attention by one particular couple. My wife and I were swimming the length of the lake and arrived at North beach where they were catching some sun. They commented on the beauty of the lake. Then the wife explained she had been concerned about being accepted due to her appearance. I explained that this is the place where people of all types can come and not have to worry about being accepted.

One final memory from this summer I cherish was the opportunity to spend part of an afternoon with Bob Morton. Bob had managed to re-route his travel back East to include Lake Edun. He was there for the evening with our neighbors.

Bob, as many of you know, is the director of the Naturist Action Committee. To be able to spend a few quiet hours with him talking about Lake Edun and naturism in general was a delight. What impressed me was his quiet, well mannered approach to problem solving. He repeatedly reminded everyone that keeping our goal clearly in focus is all important. Anything that distracts from this should be dropped. Thanks for coming our way Bob.

Nudists and naturists make up a large share of the American population. In a 2006 Roper Poll, 24% of the population said they have gone "skinny dipping" or nude sunbathing. For the under 35 group, the number is 32%. That's one out of four in the general population and almost 1/3 of the under 35 market. These are all people who would enjoy our special place. Spread the word!
